

Merjent Named a Top Workplace in Minnesota

Minneapolis, Minnesota, June 15, 2015: Merjent, Inc. (Merjent), an environmental and social consulting firm headquartered in Minneapolis, is honored to have been named one of the Top 150 Workplaces in Minnesota by the Star Tribune. The list of Top 150 Workplaces winners was published in a special section of the Star Tribune on Sunday, June 14, 2015, and details can be found at <http://www.startribune.com/2015-top-150-workplaces/307123441/>

Produced by the same team that compiles the 24-year-old Star Tribune 100 report of the best-performing public companies in Minnesota, Top Workplaces recognizes the most progressive and people-centric companies in Minnesota. Rankings were based on evaluation of anonymous surveys that gathered employee opinions related to employee engagement, organizational health, and satisfaction.

In choosing the winners, responses were evaluated from over 69,100 employees at 2,100 participating Minnesota public, private, and nonprofit organizations with over 50 employees located in Minnesota. Rankings were then based on composite scores calculated purely on the basis of employee responses. Survey information was collected by Workplace Dynamics, an independent company specializing in employee engagement and retention.

Merjent was ranked 31 out of 70 organizations on the top small companies list.

“Merjent is honored to be named one of Star Tribune’s Top Workplaces”, said Merjent President and CEO, Tom Janssen, “especially because the award reflects positive feedback from our staff. We have the best people in the environmental consulting industry working for us -- they are the key to our company’s success. It makes sense to do what we can to provide them with a great work environment.”

Star Tribune Publisher Michael J. Klingensmith said, “The companies in the Star Tribune Top 150 Workplaces deserve high praise for creating the very best work environments in the state of Minnesota. My congratulations to each of these exceptional companies.”
